Working closely with high-net-worth individuals and family offices, Parker Taylor counsels clients on estate, gift, and generation-skipping transfer and income tax matters. He frequently advises on estate and trust administrations, and on all aspects of tax controversy, including IRS examinations and appeals, and litigation.

Trusted counsel with a strategic approach to wealth administration

A seasoned practitioner, Parker is adept at assisting clients with their most complex private wealth matters. Clients rely on him for their multigenerational wealth transfer planning, and business succession planning. He has extensive experience in estate, trust and guardianship administration and controversies, and is skilled at navigating complex issues to help clients manage their affairs with confidence.

Parker takes a personalized, individualized approach to help clients navigate the private wealth arena so they can achieve their wealth management goals. He frequently writes and speaks on the latest private wealth trends and issues, which helps inform his practice to the benefit of clients seeking creative yet sound approaches to their matters.

Parker maintains an active pro bono practice and has co-coordinated a series of pro bono estate planning clinics for Holocaust Survivors since 2015.
