Ally Jordan works with clients when they are involved in commercial litigation, government investigations, matters on appeal, or need dispositive motions at the trial-court level. Clients also turn to her for help evaluating and addressing risks and opportunities surrounding environmental, social and governance (ESG) strategies. Ally values each client relationship, putting a premium on client service through frequent communication and adherence to the highest professional standards.

Dedication to client service and effective advocacy

A former federal appellate clerk, Ally has written critical motions and appellate briefs in federal and state courts, representing corporate and individual clients in complex civil litigation and criminal matters. She has assisted corporate clients across a range of industries, including telecommunications companies, airlines, financial services companies, healthcare and insurance providers, and non-profits with high-stakes cases in both state and federal court.

Ally has worked with trial and arbitration teams to respond to complaints, settle discovery disputes, prepare fact and expert witnesses, take and defend depositions, and draft pretrial motions and motions in limine. She regularly assists those same teams on appeal, drafting briefs and petitions, and advising on legal strategy. Ally also assists companies facing ESG-related litigation risks.

Ally is a frequent writer and has contributed to multiple articles regarding ESG litigation.
