Joe Lecroy advises health care providers, specialized practices, universities and private equity firms on transactions or regulatory compliance issues to help them achieve their goals as they navigate a complex and heavily regulated market. Thorough and efficient, Joe saves clients time and resources with his focused due diligence, skilled research and careful document drafting.

Attention to detail and thorough approach drives results

Joe draws on his experience during law school working with the district and federal courts in Texas, as well as in the legal department of a major financial services company.

Joe served as articles editor for the SMU Law Review Association.
