Jordan Benton focuses his practice on the commercial mortgage-backed securities (CMBS) market and representing lenders in other forms of commercial real estate lending. He works with institutional banks, commercial real estate financing companies and insurance companies across various loan structures.

Fast closings open new opportunities

Jordan's proficiency with CMBS not only benefits his clients directly, it helps them provide a more positive experience for their borrowers, helping lenders earn more business in the future.

He makes a point of ensuring his legal strategy aligns with his clients' ultimate business aims. This allows him to work toward a client's preferred outcome efficiently and effectively.

Jordan has worked on all facets of the origination process for loans in various asset classes (including office buildings, industrial facilities, retail facilities and more) over the years. This experience gives him a 360-degree understanding of how to manage CMBS and other financing transactions efficiently for his clients.

Prior to joining Katten, Jordan was an associate with a regional insurance defense firm.
