Eugene Allison represents buyers, sellers, developers, landlords and tenants of commercial real estate. He also leads and coordinates the efforts of attorneys and paralegals on Katten's Real Estate due diligence team in Charlotte for the purchase, sale or financing of real estate located nationwide.

Anticipating problems before closings ensures better outcomes

Eugene's experience enables him to evaluate each real estate transaction from a legal perspective and identify any problems that need to be resolved to avoid or mitigate risks. Working with commercial real estate of all sizes and types, he can craft the necessary documents to make each transaction move forward successfully. If a property's problems cannot be resolved, then making the client aware of the risks involved may prevent them from making a bad investment.

Eugene has worked as in-house counsel for a national retailer. He has also worked in private practice for both small and large firms on deals of all sizes including large portfolios that involve many properties.
