Rebecca Kinburn has considerable experience in complex business litigation. She has assisted clients in a broad range of matters in court, arbitration and administrative proceedings, including bankruptcy, securities litigation, patent litigation, white-collar representation and general commercial litigation.

Litigation in different industries enhances overall experience

Rebecca's notable business litigation experience includes representation of financial institutions in securities litigation matters stemming from the 2008 financial crisis. Then she assisted a pharmaceutical company in defending at trial a $100 million damages claim after an infringement finding. She has also represented corporate clients in disputes in fraud, breach of contracts and breach-of-fiduciary-duty claims.

She has worked on several high-profile bankruptcy litigation matters, including a breach-of-contract claim related to the reorganization of a multibillion-dollar hotel and entertainment company and the liquidation of a multibillion-dollar global technology company.

Rebecca has represented clients in financial services matters involving various regulatory bodies including FINRA, the SEC, the CFTC and the Department of Justice.
