

ARTICLE

Don't Say 'the Unvaccinated' and Beware Mandatory Policies, Managing Partner Argues

Published by Law.com International

August 10, 2021

Subscription may be required to access article.

Article offers insight on how UK regulations and cultural differences present challenges for global firms implementing policies driven by US-based employers. In addition to highlighting how "unvaccinated" invokes "overtones of second class," legal issues around confidentiality of personal medical records make it unlikely that employers can ask UK employees about their vaccination status. "Here, the ICO has issued guidance on the very limited circumstances where asking for an employee's vaccine status will be lawful. ... The same can be determined across the whole of Europe where GDPR also applies." "Treading carefully" and being sensitive to these national differences will help global companies approach these challenging topics in a way that is more culturally inclusive.

Don't Say 'the Unvaccinated' and Beware Mandatory Policies, Managing Partner Argues

CONTACTS

For more information, contact your Katten attorney or any of the following attorneys.

Christopher Hitchins +44 (0) 20 7776 7663 christopher.hitchins@katten.co.uk