

Content Owners' Pursuit of Secondary Infringement Claims

Published in Law Journal Newsletters' Entertainment Law & Finance

February 2014

This article (the second in a two-part piece) discusses several cases in which plaintiffs have sought to establish a defendant's liability as a secondary copyright infringer after having defeated a safe harbor protection argument, and the difficulty for plaintiffs in succeeding at doing so at the summary judgment phase.

To read the first part of the article, click here.