Benny Westreich has helped bring to life some of the most complex real estate developments of recent years, including the construction of three multi-billion-dollar sports arena mixed-use complexes and one stadium project presently under construction. In a business where events rarely unfold as planned, he anticipates potential problems and makes appropriate adjustments so that clients don't meet with unwelcome surprises. He counsels clients on all sides of transactions, (including lenders and borrowers, developers and equity partners, buyers and sellers and landlords and tenants), covering the full panoply and life-cycle of transactional real estate experience, including joint ventures, purchases, development and construction, financing, leasing, operating, selling, workouts/deed-in-lieus and bankruptcy.

Finding opportunities

Benny takes on a role for clients that goes well beyond just executing transactions and performing legal review. He keeps his eyes open for opportunities, sensing the ones that will fit his clients' business goals. When high-profile problems arise, he advises clients on crisis management strategies. He views his role as a counselor in addition to being a lawyer. One of Benny's clients, in Chambers USA, described him as "...what I consider a business lawyer should be; he understands that it is key to find a compromise and not just be right." Private equity firms, real estate investment trusts (REITs) and individuals are among the investors that regularly turn to Benny for transactions involving all types of commercial and residential properties.

In a complex real estate project, such as the financing and construction of mixed-use facilities, Benny knows how to coordinate interlocking deal pieces involving multiple properties and uses, keeping an eye out for the long-term prospects, including ownership restructurings and bifurcations, refinancing and exit strategies. His work has also included public-private financings, which require careful attention to public relations as well as legal issues.

"I have found Benny Westreich to be a world-class professional whose strategic thinking and execution is superb. I am always impressed by his integrity and wisdom. Aside from all that he does know in real estate and deal making, as well as numerous areas of transactional and constitutional law, he is honest and humble enough to direct me to the appropriate colleague when asked for advice outside his specific areas of specialty."
