Gabriella Weick concentrates her practice on litigation matters. She advises corporate clients, financial institutions and individuals in both state and federal courts in commercial litigation and other related disputes. Gabriella also has experience in antitrust matters, representing clients in antitrust cases before enforcement agencies and handling regulatory filings in the merger clearance process.

Effective and strategic advocate with a client-focused approach

Gabriella pairs courtroom instincts with a close understanding of how courts evaluate the arguments put before them. She recently served as law clerk to the Honorable Lee G. Dunst, US Magistrate Judge for the Eastern District of New York.

While in law school, Gabriella served as competition editor for the Brendan Moore Trial Advocacy Program, competed in and won national trial advocacy competitions, and worked as a staff member on the International Law Journal. She also participated in legal externship programs at the New York State Attorney General's Office and the Queens District Attorney's Office.
