Casey McClaren concentrates her practice on litigation and enforcement matters with a focus on the financial services industry and the federal securities laws.

Committed to excellent client service and zealous advocacy

Casey regularly represents banks, broker-dealers, trading firms and individuals in regulatory investigations and enforcement proceedings, including before the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC), Commodity Futures Trading Commission (CFTC) and self-regulatory organizations (SROs). She guides clients through every stage of an investigation. From the first inquiry through final resolution, Casey works with clients to develop practical strategies that help them address regulatory scrutiny in a manner that minimizes business disruption and risk.

In addition to her regulatory practice, Casey represents clients in high-stakes civil litigation in federal and state courts and in arbitration proceedings, including complex commercial disputes. She has handled matters at every phase of litigation, from early motion practice and discovery through hearing and trial preparation.

Before attending law school, Casey worked as an analyst in a regulatory and compliance role at a major US bank. While in law school, she also served as a legal intern at the CFTC, a judicial extern to the Honorable Rudolph Contreras in the US District Court for the District of Columbia, the Development and Diversity Editor of the Georgetown Journal on Gender and the Law, and a tutor for civil procedure and constitutional law.
