Brandon von Kriegelstein advises a broad range of clients, including hospital systems, pharmaceutical companies, health plans, individual health care providers, and other stakeholders regarding their regulatory, operational, and compliance needs. Brandon helps clients navigate the constantly changing health care regulatory landscape and provides guidance on issues involving the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act (HIPAA), data privacy, artificial intelligence (AI), Food and Drug Administration (FDA) regulations, payor disputes, bid protests, internal investigations, government investigations and peer review.

Health care knowledge based on longstanding experience

Prior to becoming an attorney, Brandon spent a decade as a licensed health care provider working in a variety of settings, from large hospitals to small startups. He has firsthand experience with the challenges that health care providers face daily, including complying with complex regulations while providing high-quality care to patients. Brandon draws on his experience as a health care provider to provide actionable counsel to clients in the health care compliance, operational and white-collar investigative spaces.
