Taylor Stilwell advises clients in the health care space on various transactional and regulatory matters. She combines deep legal insight with practical strategies and a results-driven approach.

Efficient, practical solutions with clear communication and a results-driven approach

After spending over a decade in various industries prior to law school, Taylor's strengths are communicating with and understanding individuals from all different backgrounds. She understands the need to "start at the end" to determine the most efficient path to a solution. Taylor uses the skills she acquired in a wide variety of environments, including nonprofits, in-house, and various law firms, to best serve her clients. During law school, she spent a significant amount of time fine-tuning her writing skills by working on a publication, participating in appellate advocacy as a brief writer, and as a research and teaching assistant.
