Gidon Caine is a trusted counselor, guiding his clients through major events in the boardroom or the C-suite, such as securities class actions, stockholder derivative actions, contests for corporate control, appraisal litigation, government and audit committee investigations, and corporate governance matters. Based in Silicon Valley, he routinely appears in courts and tribunals throughout the country, including the leading courts deciding cutting-edge corporate issues. He represents clients located throughout the world, from San Jose to Dubai, Qatar, Beijing, Brazil and points in between.

Esteemed counsel for leading innovators

Gidon is well-known for his strategic and results-oriented approach. When representing companies, their directors and officers, and venture and private equity investors in securities class actions, stockholder derivative actions, contests for corporate control and appraisal litigation, he digs deep into the intricacies of each case to present a compelling narrative to courts and regulators.

Insightful and precise securities litigator

Clients praise Gidon for his out-of-the-box solutions to challenging matters and zealous advocacy. He has worked primarily with technology companies, their officers, directors, private and venture funds and private equity funds. Gidon was co-lead counsel to a Fortune 50 company defending an appraisal action, which resulted in a precedent-setting Delaware Supreme Court opinion on whether the deal price of a transaction is the fair price for purposes of appraisal. He represented the original Japanese investor and Wynn Resorts Board member in his fight with Steve Wynn for control of the company. Gidon is a member of several D&O insurance panels.

Clients have praised him in Chambers USA as "vastly experienced with handling securities litigation," who is "very sharp, very strategic and very results-oriented," with an "excellent technical approach" and as having "an incredible command of the facts and can present them in a simple and
