Paul R. DeMuro primarily works with organizations in the health care and information technology space, including those that employ risk bearing, data analytics and clinical integration models. He helps such organizations navigate the landscape in the context of their mergers and acquisitions, joint ventures, restructurings, and transactions for which he often is the legal architect. He is particularly facile in working with complex entities and multiple stakeholders in fashioning creative solutions to the issues they face.

Fastidious with a deep understanding of analytics

Paul brings a cross-disciplinary approach to problem solving. Holding a PhD in Biomedical Informatics from a medical school, degrees in business/finance and economics, and being a Certified Public Accountant (Maryland), he brings a distinctive and wide-ranging perspective to Katten and its clients. Having served as a partner at a top-tier law firm, he is experienced in designing novel solutions to client matters. Paul is passionate about the use of information technology to improve health care, and focused on this area as a National Library of Medicine postdoctoral fellow. His experience also includes serving as a chief legal officer for a real estate development company and as an associate professor in a College of Pharmacy.
