Julia DeVincenzi advises healthcare clients on transactional and regulatory matters across a range of industry sectors, including hospitals and health systems, physician groups, private equity-backed platforms and healthcare technology companies.

Thoughtful guidance in complex regulatory settings

Prior to joining Katten, Julia practiced at a large law firm advising clients on a variety of healthcare regulatory and transactional matters, including acquisitions, strategic partnerships, compliance with federal and state regulations, and related filings. She continues to counsel providers, investors and other stakeholders on issues such as licensure, the corporate practice of medicine, healthcare fraud and abuse laws (including the Anti-Kickback Statute, the Stark Law, and the False Claims Act), as well as privacy and data security compliance under HIPAA and other applicable laws.

During law school, Julia earned certificates in Health Law and Compliance from Loyola University Chicago School of Law.
