Michael P. Antosiewicz focuses his practice primarily on white-collar defense, securities litigation, and regulatory defense.

Diligence and careful attention to complicated legal problems

Michael has experience as a clerk both for a federal district court and for a state supreme court, which has prepared him to attack complex legal problems by enabling him to appreciate the broader legal landscape while focusing on the practical and procedural complications of litigation. Michael has a passion for the law, and he greatly enjoys confronting and researching new legal problems. His focus and determination mean that he leaves no stone unturned in his work.
