Summer McKee focuses her practice on both the transactional and litigation aspects of business reorganizations, both in and out of court, across a wide range of industries, including technology, private equity, health care and life sciences. While she frequently guides debtors and other constituents through the Chapter 11 process, Summer also enjoys advising clients on a wide variety of solvency-related issues, including distressed investing opportunities, Section 363 acquisitions and a diverse array of creditor rights issues.

Transforming conflict and uncertainty into synergistic solutions

Summer's zealous advocacy and ability to efficiently navigate the perils inherent in complex bankruptcy litigation has played a key role in generating positive outcomes for clients. She has significant experience representing debtors and other key parties in Chapter 11 bankruptcy proceedings, but is also adept at guiding clients in the development and implementation of creative, value-maximizing out-of-court strategies whenever possible. While respected for her litigation prowess, Summer is well-known for her determination to transform conflict into collaboration, never losing focus on the straightest path to achieving the client's overarching goals.
