Camryn Rohr represents clients in complex commercial disputes, tailoring her approach to their business objectives and the demands of each matter. Whether advancing a client's position through trial or pursuing a negotiated resolution, she brings careful preparation and sound judgment to every stage of a dispute.

A strategic approach to resolving and preventing complex business disputes

Camryn also advises clients on business practices designed to reduce litigation risk. Her experience clerking for the North Carolina Business Court, where she worked on sophisticated disputes involving closely held companies and other commercial matters, informs her practical approach to both dispute resolution and risk management.
