Mergers and Acquisitions and Private Equity Associate Madison Weber advises with a client-focused approach. She combines careful legal analysis with an understanding of the business objectives driving each transaction, helping her clients implement their long-term goals into sound legal strategy.

Tailored strategies for each client's needs

Madison is passionate about working with clients to develop nuanced strategies to fit their needs. She tailors her approach to clients' mergers and acquisitions and private equity transactions by combining close attention to legal detail with an understanding of their business objectives. Madison served as chief of the Southern Methodist University (SMU) Dedman School of Law Small Business and Trademark Clinic for three consecutive semesters, gaining experience navigating complex legal issues in highly personal contexts. She also wrote for the American Bar Association's International Law Review. This culminated in the publication of her note on fashion sustainability laws, which strengthened her research and writing skills and deepened her appreciation for precision and creativity in legal writing.
