Emilie Daramola's externships in federal and state prosecutorial offices shaped her litigation skill set, including her drafting and courtroom advocacy.

Advocacy shaped by courtroom experience

At the United States Attorney's Office, Emilie drafted motions and briefs and argued criminal matters before the court. The work strengthened her advocacy and persuasive abilities and deepened her insight into how judges evaluate written and oral arguments.

Emilie's writing has been repeatedly recognized. She earned the highest grade in her Litigation Drafting and Constitutional Law II courses and received awards for her moot court briefs.
