Veteran litigator David Goldberg is an attorney financial institutions turn to when facing high-stakes, complex litigation and enforcement matters. A former AUSA who later ran major disputes and regulatory investigations in-house at a global investment bank, David guides clients through make-or-break cases, nationwide class actions and government-facing enforcement matters with a no-surprises approach.

Delivering results when the company is on the line

David has led defense teams in multi-billion-dollar exposures, including a federal civil fraud case brought by a foreign sovereign that resolved on the eve of jury selection, a pending civil RICO action tied to nationwide military-housing financing, and coordinated proceedings stemming from options strategies with alleged losses exceeding $1 billion — where he secured defense awards in most arbitrations and constrained recoveries in the rest. He has also obtained complete defense results in Financial Industry Regulatory Authority (FINRA) arbitrations on nine-figure claims and won dispositive rulings in cases seeking tens of millions of dollars, while managing parallel risks across equities, fixed income, investment banking and wealth management businesses.

Drawing on a decade inside a major financial institution and years in federal service, David understands how litigation and investigations intersect with business imperatives and regulatory scrutiny. He positions clients to protect enterprise value, limit collateral consequences and reach durable outcomes when there is no margin for error.

Understanding financial services disputes from the inside out

Serving as executive director and senior associate general counsel for UBS Securities LLC, David managed many of the firm's largest investment banking disputes and regulatory investigations. He knows the challenges and opportunities financial institutions face during important litigations, regulatory investigations and enforcement matters, and his understanding of the industry allows him to position his clients for the best outcomes possible.
