

International Derivatives Expo

Presented by Futures Industry Association

June 9–10, 2015

Carolyn Jackson, a partner in the Financial Services practice, will chair a panel discussion at the Futures Industry Association's International Derivatives Expo on Tuesday, June 9 at 2:00 p.m. (GMT). Carolyn's panel, "What's Different About Commodities?," will discuss how regulatory reform is causing concern among commodity market participants. With commodities under price pressure, and new rules likely to result in the need for more regulatory capital and for new categories of authorization, the potential impact on market liquidity is significant. Carolyn's panel will debate what will be the longer-term effect on hedging, and the number of firms able to provide client services.
