

Kristin Achterhof Recognized Among Managing Intellectual Property's 'Top 250 Women in IP'

April 28, 2023

Managing Intellectual Property has named Intellectual Property partner Kristin Achterhof on its 2023 list of the "Top 250 Women in IP," which honors leading female intellectual property (IP) practitioners in private practice who have provided exceptional service for their clients and firms during the past year. This is the third time Kristin has received this honor from Managing Intellectual Property.

As both a passionate advocate and trusted advisor on copyright, trademark and other intellectual property issues, Kristin has long been recognized for her robust representation of clients seeking to optimize and protect their invaluable IP rights worldwide. She is counsel to multinational clients across a wide spectrum of industries, including household names and world-famous brands in the technology, entertainment, fashion, consumer goods and manufacturing sectors. Skilled both inside and outside the courtroom, Kristin regularly handles complex disputes in judicial and administrative tribunals and advises clients on strategies related to IP portfolio management and IP-related transactions. Clients also benefit from her extensive knowledge and experience in disputes involving their advertising, marketing and promotions practices.

Managing Intellectual Property's 2023 list of the "Top 250 Women in IP" features individuals from more than 30 jurisdictions across the globe. Practitioners recognized on the list were selected from Managing Intellectual Property's IP Stars list for the year.
