

Law360 Features Alexander Volsky's Arrival at Katten

December 1, 2025

Law360 profiled Private Credit Partner Alexander Volsky and his arrival in Katten's Dallas office. Alexander is expected to bolster the firm's nationally recognized private credit practice and expand its capacity to advise on a wide range of financing matters.

Alexander emphasized that Katten's platform and culture were central to his decision, describing the firm's attorneys as "sophisticated and approachable" and highlighting that Katten has "one of the marquee private credit practices nationally." He noted his commitment to continuing his practice in Dallas to help clients navigate the region's fast-growing finance ecosystem, pointing to the city's "bustling private credit market and expanding finance industry sectors" as a source of significant opportunity.

Alexander underscored the cross-border dimension of his work, explaining, "One of the things I bring to the table is my international experience," which will support Katten clients in complex, multi-jurisdictional financing transactions. His practice spans advising borrowers and lenders on private credit, leveraged and structured financings. He is admitted to practice in Texas, New York, and in England and Wales.
