Erica Youngerman helps clients as they navigate today's complex health law and health care business transactions landscape. She advises a wide range of health care entities, including physician and other provider practices, hospitals and other health systems, pharmacies and hospice and home care companies, and other participants in the health care industry, including private equity backed management services organizations.

Enterprising health care transactional counsel focused on meeting client business goals

Erica advises clients from the beginning to end of health care transactions, including coordinating and conducting health care regulatory as well as corporate and other due diligence and drafting purchase agreements, management services agreements, professional services agreements and other transaction documents. In addition, Erica advises clients on more pure regulatory analyses, including with respect to the Stark law, Anti-Kickback Statute, state corporate practice of medicine and licensure laws and a myriad of other regulations affecting the health care industry.

Erica is active in professional and public service communities, serving as a mentor for aspiring attorneys and other young professionals.
