Sarah Weber helps clients facing litigation and enforcement matters with a focus on the financial services industry. The team relies on her experience with regulatory and internal investigations, federal and state court litigation, arbitration, regulatory and enforcement proceedings, white collar criminal matters, and internal investigations.

Adding value through regulatory insight

In the financial services industry, Sarah has represented US and multinational banks, investment advisors and managers, and hedge funds in litigation and arbitration related to derivatives and other complex financial products. Among others, Sarah has litigated antitrust and False Claims Act matters across federal and state courts. She has deep experience in eDiscovery and can help clients build an efficient and targeted plan to manage complex litigation.

In the enforcement space, Sarah has a broad range of experience in connection with investigations by the Commodity Futures Trading Commission (CFTC), the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC), the Financial Industry Regulatory Authority (FINRA), the Department of Justice (DOJ), the New York and Illinois Attorneys General, the New York Department of Financial Services, the Federal Reserve Bank of New York and Federal Reserve Board of Governors, and the Office of Foreign Assets Control (OFAC) related to reporting violations, economic sanctions, anti-money laundering, wire fraud, securities fraud and many other issues.

Sarah's pro bono activities include submission of amicus briefs on behalf of victims of domestic violence through the Domestic Violence Legal Empowerment and Appeals Project (DV LEAP) and advising pro se litigants through the Northern District of Illinois's Hibbler Pro Se Federal Court Help Desk.

Before joining Katten, Sarah worked at a large New York-based law firm. She clerked for the Honorable Susan Phillips Read on the New York Court of Appeals. While attending law school, Sarah was a member of the University of Chicago Law Review.
