Elizabeth D. Langdale concentrates her practice in litigation and dispute resolution matters primarily in New York. Elizabeth assists clients with various issues including navigating government, regulatory and internal investigations, and handling litigation or alternative dispute resolution of a variety of matters.

Helping clients from health care institutions to medium-size hedge funds with litigation

Most of Elizabeth's clients are in the financial services and health care industries. They range in size from individuals to a moderately sized hedge fund to the largest municipal health care system in the country. Elizabeth helps clients navigate government investigations and conduct internal investigations. She also litigates complex civil litigation cases involving both government and private plaintiffs.

Elizabeth has represented clients in False Claims Act-related investigations and litigation. She also regularly counsels clients on Medicaid and Medicare matters. This includes federal and state investigations, compliance regulations and fraud allegations.

Her practice also extends to work in white-collar criminal matters, regulatory enforcement matters and corporate internal investigations.

Representative Experience

- Defended large municipality and large health care system in qui tam False Claims Act litigation in the US District Court for the Southern District of New York. Plaintiffs alleged our clients submitted or caused the submission of false Medicaid claims for services alleged to have been provided in violation of Medicaid regulatory requirements. Also alleged a "reverse false claim" cause of action pursuant to 31 U.S.C. § 3729(a)(1)(G).
